Egypt is leading Africa in the number of users on Facebook, and has increased

CAUSE + Facebook = CHANGE

Brand Stance + Facebook = Brand Loyalty

How Facebook helped lead to change:

1. Socialize, publicize, and mobilize
2. Real time updates
3. Easy to spread
4. Reliability (by the people, for the people)
5. Peer-to-peer/recommendation and opinion shifting
6. Use of multimedia

The Egyptian Twitter Revolution

Twitter usage explosion - Egypt

JAN 25: Twitter blocked in the afternoon as demonstrations gain momentum. Curfews are broken by protesters.

JAN 27: Facebook also blocked. Egyptians find alternate access through tools like HootSuite and remote proxy servers.

JAN 28: Protests escalate. Egyptian government cuts off access to the 4 main Internet providers. Nevertheless, some messages still get through.

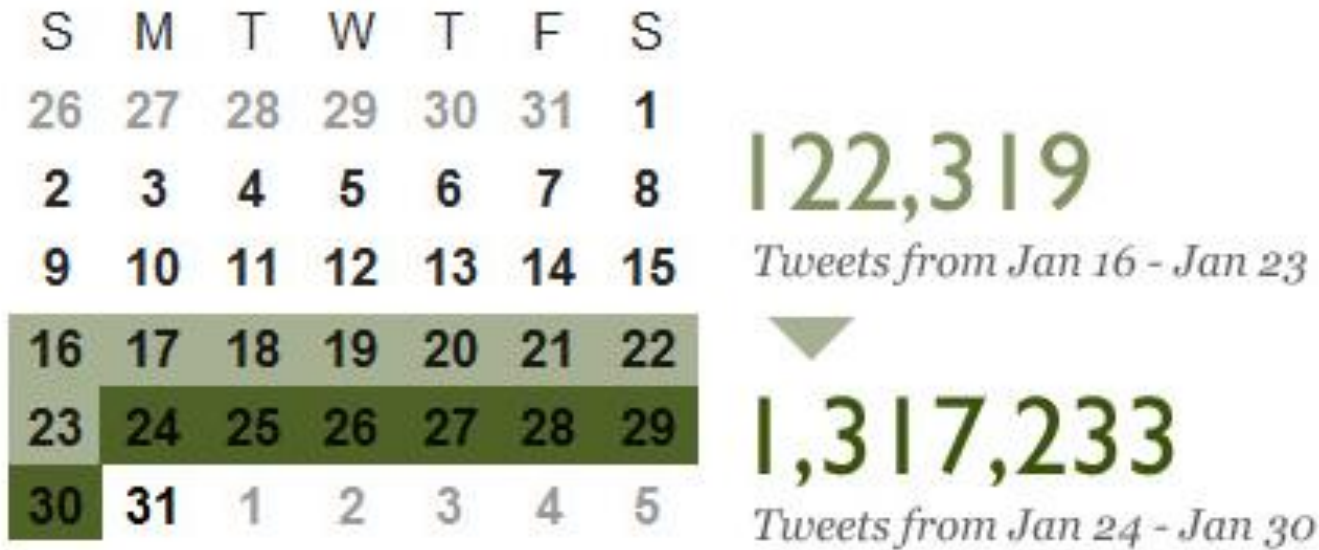

JAN 29: The outside world helps organize resources for Egyptians to get their messages out via landlines, satellite, ad hoc ISPs and @Repeat2tweet.

Some...Uses of Twitter

- Quick answers: If someone wants to ask any question, Tweet about it and someone should always answer
- Socialize, publicize, mobilize
- Breaking news: quick sharing and spreading of news
- Support your favorite team, store, celebrity
- Link with on ground real life activities
- Communicate job opportunities

why as a brand use Twitter now?

- Twitter has shown its popularity in the Egyptian society, and getting to know more about it
- Great for linkage with on-ground activations
- Peer-to-peer recommendation / Opinion shifting
- Informal communication with customers
- More personal than any other media and direct response is the key
- Brands must NOW identify their stance in the current situation - and communicate it through Social Media

Citizen Journalism

Twitter has turned the average person into a critic. Now people without a background in journalism have a platform to express their opinions about brands/products.

Brands need to participate in the ongoing conversation, and have a say in what is being said.

You can have the power to join with the fans in confirming or denying news about your brand.

Upload pictures and videos related to the brand

A brand can leverage online 'influencers' to make testimonials

The Time has Come for Social Media

Every brand needs to identify a stance
